Hypnosis The do-it-yourself method

"Your subconscience mind does not know the difference between dreaming and reality"

-Irma Oestmann-Beard

n this age of do-it-yourself, people are fixing their kitchens, their gardens and ... their psyches.

One such group of adventurous souls meets weekly at the San Antonio Heights home of a woman trained both as a minister and a hypnotherapist. But they are not there for counseling, as much as they are there to learn to hypnotize themselves.

Through self-hypnosis, the students struggle to overcome such problems as quitting smoking and losing weight. Because they are learning to do the procedure on their own, their instructor often does not even know what their individual goals are.

Jim Snyder of Rancho
Cucamonga began attending Irma Oestmann-Beard's self-hypnosis lessons a few months ago in order to conquer his compulsive overeating.

Having lost 23 pounds, he feels he has succeeded, but he continues the sessions in order to tackle other aspects of his compulsive behavior including drinking, nail biting and his salt intake.

"I really get to the root of the problem. It's years and years of bad habits. This really gets to the subconscious. That's where compulsiveness is," he said.

Snyder's compulsiveness has been transferred to the selfhypnosis itself, he said, adding that this was a positive use of his inclination.

One of Oestmann-Beard's more enthusiastic students, he is able to hypnotize himself frequently, and without the aid of the cassette tapes most students rely on.

"I've always felt guilty about taking private time," Snyder said. "Now I feel good about it. It makes me feel like I've had a nap."

During a recent session, class members grabbed pillows and stretched out on couches or on the floor in Oestmann-Beard's living room.

Speaking in gentle, slow tones, she tells them to relax by feeling one of four physical sensations in their lower bodies: heavy, light, warm and cool.

She tells them to feel the physical sensation they pick, as well as an emotion such as joy, serenity, freedom and love.

According to Oestmann-Beard, these are keys, along with the third suggestion of deep sleep, for an easy transition to self-hypnosis.

She tells her students to avoid negative statements — I can't lose weight — and to train the subconscious to believe a change has already taken place.

"If you can believe it, you can achieve it," she said.

She describes the state of hypnosis as "an up and down kind of consciousness like dreaming."

Oestmann-Beard, who has a penchant for succinct phrases, tells her students, "What you dream about today will be truth tomorrow."

Although their teen-age daughter is a little skeptical about the procedure, Snyder and his wife, Carol, warned against believing the stereotypes of hypnosis.

"I liked that it was taught from a Christian point of view. It's important because it wasn't some witch doctor," he said, adding that many people still believe the Hollywood image. "They think someone will wave a pencil in your face and you'll become a puppet."

Attending the sessions together has an added benefit for the couple.

"As a couple, we've found it stimulating to spend time on ourselves," Mrs. Snyder said.

"Rather than just talking about house problems, the kids, we're talking about ourselves," Snyder added. □

By Marianne Aiken

Jasper Elementary School principal and local historian Bob Schmidt is retiring while he still has time to write a few stories and travel.

"I'd like to write readable history," Schmidt said. "Not great erudite studies, but something everybody can enjoy ... add a little humor."

Schmidt, 60, is ending a career in education that spanned 33 years, 11 of them as the first principal of Jasper

He said he didn't want to sound too "high-blown," but said he went into education

Organization, discipline mark of school's success

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Last year Marcus Beasley's junior high school jumped 54 points in written expression, 50 points in math and 32 points in reading on California Assessment Program scores.

This year the Baldwin Park school where the Upland resident is principal, was named one of 60 distinguished middle schools in the state.

Beasley credits the emphasis on organization and discipline with his school's success. If that doesn't sound like much fun, Beasley said, on the contrary, his students have their share of

Just last week students competed against teachers in a couple of softball games.

"This lets kids realize that teachers are human beings and lead lives outside of the classroom," he said. Seeing the teachers as only human was especially easy Thursday when the boys and girls beat out the coed teacher team.

But before a friendly relationship can exist between pupil and pedagogue, Beasley insists that there must be order and control. However, it must be doled out in a way the students understand, he said.

5 students face intensive study of government

By Suzanne Sproul

Instead of studying American government from books this summer, five West Valley high school juniors will learn about the process through participation

Renee Whited, Karen Anderson, Rachelle Younger, Kelly Fuller and Dadhri Keane will represent the American Legion Auxiliary Ontario Unit 112 at Girls State in Sacramento. June 30-July 7.

The Girls State program has been sponsored the past 47 years by Legion auxiliaries throughout the state. Patriotism, citizenship and studies of how city, county and state governments operate will be stressed during the week-long

"The girls will be receiving a whole year of government study in one week. They will set up their own platforms and will run for office," said Myrtle Johnstone, auxiliary program

Johnstone was assisted by Helen Meier, Adeline Coulter, Ruth Phillips and Lea Perry

"I think it will be a real learning experience, especially since we'll be out on our own. said 17-year-old Keane.

Whited agreed. "I expect to learn a lot more about our government and how it works than I know now," she said

Anderson said social studies always has been a favorite subject.

"I like to know what's going on, and I think I'll see a lot more about government at Girls State than reading about it," she said.

"At school you read all about government in books, but we'll actually be able to do it. That will be exciting," said 16-year-old Fuller.

Johnstone will accompany the five young women on the long bus ride from Riverside to Sacramento.

"I've been to Girls State before. I've always said that if we could spread the love shown at Girls State around we'd never have another war," she said.

Delegates were selected because of their academic standing and extracurricular activities. Each young woman also was interviewed by the Girls State committee.

The delegates, the schools they represent and some of their activities are:

 Renee Whited, 17, Chaffey High School; started performing in the band during her freshman year; president of Pep Club; varsity Pep Squad cheerleader; treasurer of the California Scholarship Federation; president-elect of Keywanettes: and academic editor of the yearbook

 Karen Lynn Anderson, 16, Montclair High School; honor student and member of the honor society for three years; varsity team in soccer in grades nine, 10 and 11; varsity team in track and field in grades nine, 10

St. Joseph's School poet wins statewide contest

Danny Martin has been writing poetry for his classes at St. Joseph's School in Upland ever since he learned how to write, and this year it paid off.

The seventh grader's poem was chosen second best statewide in a parochial school contest.

Martin's poem "Love and Friendship" placed first in one of the divisions of a local contest sponsored by the local chapter of Catholic Daughters of the Americas. He competed with classmates and students from three other area parochial schools.

Other winners in the division for seventh graders were Pam Williams, second, and Alicia Reigenborn, third, both from St. Joseph's.

Winners in the division for fourth through sixth graders were Charles Tanner, first, of Our Lady of Lourdes School in Montclair; Monica Sandoval, second, of Our Lady of Lourdes School; and Jeff Mistry, third, of St. Joseph's.

OMSD trustees delay action on air-conditioning for schools

By Andrew Horan

It was hot and stuffy in the auditorium where the Ontario-Montclair School District board of trustees met last Thursday evening.

So hot and stuffy that trustees quit the drawn-out meeting before the last two of 34 agenda items could be considered.

By a 4-1 vote, the trustees also rejected an administration plan to allocate $84,000 to an Upland architect to study airconditioning two of the district's schools.

They'll tackle those items and more in the comfort of a different, air-conditioned venue in two weeks.

But while trustees and administrators enjoy the comforts of climate control, students in at least 20 of the district's 31 schools continue to suffer the heat of the day.

Trustees thought they cooled complaints over the stifling heat last month when they authorized spending $850,000 — more than 40 percent of OMSD's lottery allocation — to air condition two schools.

Vacation Bible school is scheduled

A vacation Bible school will be held at Grace Brethren Church of Alta Loma, 5719 Beryl St., Monday-Friday from 9:30-11:30 a.m.

At the same time a bible class and craft class will also be held for mothers. For more information call 980-0727. Serrano Junior High School and Mission School were chosen first because they were built to be air-conditioned, Superintendent George Dibs explained again last Thursday.

To speed the project, Dibs and Ron Fukagawa, OMSD business manager, presented trustees with a ready-for-approval contract for Lloyd Dodds, an Upland architect, to study and design the systems.

Dodds would earn 7 percent — an estimated $84,000 — to evaluate the schools' ducting systems and design the most efficient air-conditioning system.

But trustees balked almost immediately at the plan.

"I was a little surprised that we have to have an architect in a school that's pre-ducted," Eileen Rigler said. "Major alterations require an architect look over" the schools, Dibs replied.

Board President David Van Fleet expressed a different concern.

"I think we probably need an expert," he said, "my problem is, with all the other schools, this could reach over $100,000 in (architect's) commissions.

"I think we need to go to bid and take a look" at other offers, he added. "Maybe we could save $50,000 to $100,000."

Trustees eventually voted to reject the plan presented by administrators.

By consensus, they instructed Dibs and Fukagawa to contact other architects to compare qualifications and cost estimates.

'De-installation' highlights R.C. C of C banquet

A "De-installation" of outgoing Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce President Jim Hampton was one of the highlights of the chamber's June 7 annual installation banquet honoring incoming president Bob Dutton of Security Management Company at the Red Hill Country Club in Rancho Cucamonga.

Emcee John Mannerino, chamber counsel and attorney with the Rancho Cucamonga law firm of Beloud and Mannerino, taunted the crowd with asides about the anticipated "deinstallation" throughout the evening that also featured an emotional public congratulations from incumbent 2nd District Supervisor Cal McElwain to his opponent, Jon Mikels.

A series of awards and acknowledgements were presented to Hampton by the city of Rancho Cucamonga, Supervisor McElwain, State Senators Reuben Ayala, D-34th District, H.L. Richardson, R-25th District and Assemblyman Chuck Bader, R-65th District.

Incoming chamber presidentelect Lowell Gomes of Inland Commerical Brokerage also awarded to Hampton on behalf of the board of directors a mounted rubber-band gun with which Hampton reportedly kept order at various meetings.

Assemblyman Bader handled the formal installation of the 1986-87 chamber officers and directors: Bob Dutton, president; Lowell Gomes, president-elect; Jim Barton, vice president; Jim Medeiros, vice president; D. Thomas Flynn, director; Faith Glascock, director; and Gary Mitchell, director. Also honored at the banquet were retiring directors Robert Glascock and Rick Nelson.

The de-installation began with magician "Shando" executing a series of tricks that culminated in Hampton's finding himself locked into a fully operable guillotine.

"This is IT" laughed Mannerino as the blade of the guillotine plummeted toward Hampton. Although the blade neatly sliced a carrot placed directly below Hampton's neck, he seemed to have avoided serious injury.

The newly selected directors will serve the chamber for the 1986-87 term beginning in July.

For Carol Altvater, it started as a distraction.

"My husband used to collect tokens and we'd go to antique shops all the time," she said. "But I was always bored, so he said, 'Why don't you collect something?"

That casual comment 16 years ago created a benevolent obsession. Altvater now collects china eggcups, and her 352-cup collection is growing.

"I have them from 16 different countries that I can identify," she said, rolling a cup over to reveal the potter's mark on the bottom.

"The ones that are marked are worth a lot more," she said. "You can identify them, find out how old they are, who made them."

Altvater uses two references, "Handbook of British Pottery and Porcelain Marks" and "Porcelain Marks of the World," to track her eggcups' lineage.

"The majority of my collection comes from Germany," she said. "Maybe they eat a lot of eggs over

"I find them at swap meets, yard sales and antique fairs," she said. "I've even bought a few at retail stores.

"I have three eggcups from Czechoslovakia and one from Romania." she said.

"We were amazed to find those. I don't think they were shipped to be sold in this country.

Not only do the cups come from all countries, they come in all materials.

This egg-cup collection started as a distraction for Carol Altvater (opposite page). Altvater's husband collected tokens, and she began gathering egg-cups "because they reminded me of my mother," she said. Altvater estimates that her 352-cup collections includes cups from 16 nations, including England, Luxembourg, Czechoslovakia and Romania.

form of discipline the kids will respect," he said.

What the students will respect, he said, is telling them exactly what it expected of them and following through with it.

Some of the recommended forms of discipline include asking the student in front of class members to stay after school, Saturday school -"Since you've wasted our time, this week we're going to waste your Saturday" - and at-home suspension when all else fails.

But Beasley said he doesn't like to see it go that far, and one of the ways he avoids it is having in-service sessions where he teaches students how to turn chaos into order.

One of the means of order that was actually mandated for the district by the school board this year is determining an educational objective each day. Each teacher is required to write the objective on the board each day, Beasley said, and that gives the class focus.

Another way the district encourages organization is by paying the teachers during the summer to create curriculums for the following school year.

But it is one of Beasley's own ideas that has helped transform this school from average to distinguished.

He calls it "peer visitation," and what it means is that he or one of his assistants will take over for a teacher four times a year, allowing that teacher to sit in on another's class. He picks the "host" teacher twice and he allows the teacher to pick the other educator twice. Later the host and the visitor get together and discuss methods, he said.

Another factor in the school's success, Beasley said, is the parents' support. That has not been as easy to gain in Baldwin Park as it might in many cities because a great deal of the parents are Mexican immigrants, he said, and they were at first intimidated by the school system.

the school and staff members of the school district raised $2,000 to pay for the trip, said viceprincipal Mike Doyle.

"It's a non-threatening way to

"He has been very supportive of the staff, interested in education and the well-being of children ... a very compassionate man," Doyle said of his soon-tobe former boss.

Schmidt pioneered many recognition programs at the school, designed to make students feel good about themselves, Doyle said.

There's a weekly spirit day on Friday, along with a weekly flag assembly during which students sing patriotic songs, a special recognition assembly every month, and awards for the artist of the month and the author of the month, Doyle said.

"Through his leadership, we are one of the leading schools in the district," Doyle said.

For instance, Jasper was the first school in the district to have a yearbook, which started three years ago. It was also the first to give out citizens' awards to students, Doyle said.

Eight trees were to be planted in Schmidt's name on the playground in a ceremony Tuesday, with a headstone, donated by Richardson-Peterson Mortuary, planted at the foot of one of the trees to commemorate Schmidt's tenure at the school.

How does Schmidt feel about retiring?

"I think I'm ready," he said, "but you can't help but miss what you've been doing for 33 years, and the people you've been working with. But I want to go while I'm still young enough to accomplish a few things."

Cucamonga District settles all fall contracts

By Marianne Aiken

John Costello is happy. So is Lydia Leidig.

The Cucamonga School District settled all of its collective bargaining contracts for next fall before the end of the school year.

And that's pretty unusual.

Costello is the school district superintendent, and Leidig is the president of the district chapter of the California School Employees Assocation (CSEA), which represents non-teaching

"That represents a first for our district," Costello said. "We're real proud of that."

The 1986-87 contracts for both teaching and non-teaching staff were worked out and approved by the school board last month, meaning 6 percent raises for both groups, plus some other percs.

The settlement with CSEA members followed a reclassification study included in the 1985-86 bargaining agreement. A consultant studied job descriptions, then compared salaries with neighboring districts.

"Our goal was to get everybody in the middle," Costello said.

The result was that 1985-86 CSEA salaries in the district became more competitive. Checks reflecting the new salaries were mailed May 30, retroactive to Jan. 1.

'The majority of the people are satisfied with the reclassification study." Leidig classified employees.

The 6 percent raises from next year's CSEA contract kicked in June 1, giving employees an extra month of higher pay, said Costello.

"We also have built in that if our enrollment reaches a certain level by Jan. 15, 1987, we'll add 2 percent more to the salary schedule," he said.

Smaller increases are included for smaller hikes in enrollment.

Additional health and welfare benefits are also part of the February, and health and welfare benefits," Costello said.

There are about 75 teachers, Costello estimated

The teachers' salary schedule was revamped, so a teacher with 15 years of experience in the classroom and a certain level of education can now make almost $40,000 a year.

This puts the district in the No. 3 spot in teacher salary levels in the West Valley, and fifth countywide, said Costello.

Schulyers advance in tennis tourney

Having defeated the defending regional champions, the fatherson tennis doubles team of Robert and Kent Schulyer will compete in the state tournament next month in Los Angeles.

The Rancho Cucamonga duo will be part of a 16-team field at the state sectional meet of the Family Equitable Tennis Challenge in Los Angeles July 26-27. The winner will advance to the national tournament, to be held during the U.S. Open in New York.

Kent, a three-year letterman at Alta Loma High School and chosen the best overall player for the Braves this past season, and his father defeated the team.
of Steve and Manuel Guillen 6-3 6-3 in Barstow earler this month.

Soccer clinic

School graduate now a defender for the Los Angeles Lazers of the Major Indoor Soccer League, will be among the staff at a soccer skills camp during July at Alta Loma Junior High School.

The camp, sponsored by AYSO Regfion 65, will consist of four one-week sessions during the month. Each session is open to players from 7 to 18 with groups being formed based on age and ability level.

Each day will consist of a fourhour session beginning at 8 a.m.

Kooiman, a four-year veteran with the Lazers, is co-ordinating the program which will place emphasis on developing basic skills and highlight play strategies and techniques. In addition to Koolman, the coaching staff will also include Val Fernandez, who's played professionally both outdoors and inside; Cal State Fullerton player Scott Pearson; and Cla Kooiman, a Chafey High personnel to maintain a mimimum staff ratio of one coach per 25 players.

Fee for each session is $25. Additional registration is avilable by calling 980-1171.

Building owner charges adult store with fraud

By Kimberly Heinrichs

An adult video store in Upland has been charged with fraud in a lawsuit filed earlier this month by the Rancho Cucamonga firm which owns the building leased by the store.

Members of HTI Construction Inc. were told that T&A Video would offer a variety of videocassettes and equipment, said Michael May, attorney for the firm.

Instead, when the store opened its doors at 2121 W. Foothill Blvd. last October, the building owners found that the store dealt exclusively with Xrated videos and paraphernalia.

"There's no objection to the business. We don't care what Mr. Welty (T&A Video's owner) does," May said. "But because of that particular use, the value of that building has decreased. If we decided to sell, the value would be impacted."

While May said his clients don't object to the adult nature of the business on moral grounds, the video store has been embroiled in a battle with the citizens group Communities Against Pornography since shortly after it opened.

The store, the first of its kind within the municipality known as "The City of Gracious Living," also prompted Upland to create an adult business ordinance. While the law is being drafted, a temporary ordinance bars new Xrated businesses from entering Roger Diamond, attorney for store owner Waldon Randall Welty and his company STRL Enterprises, said he thinks the lawsuit is more of a dispute over rent than anything else.

Diamond has not seen a copy of the lawsuit yet, but he said that Welty has received letters from HTI Construction asking for an increase in the rent agreed upon in the five-year lease signed in December 1984.

"I don't think there's any basis to the case. I think they're trying to increase the rent payments in excess of what the lease calls for," he said, adding that he was speculating. "Some people might call it extortion."

Diamond said he was told that the reason given in the letter for the rent increase was the nature of the business and the loss of property value because of it.

In the suit, HTI Construction claims its damages are more than $25,000. Because it claims Welty's company fraudulently concealed the fact that the store would be an adult business "with the intent to deprive (HTI Construction) of valuable property," it also is asking for $1 million in punitive damages.

The firm also is asking to legally break its lease with the video store.

Also named in the suit is Donald Charles Mack whose Upland real estate agency arranged the lease.

"What the complaint says is he either knew or he should have known and in either case he should have disclosed (the nature of Welty's intended business)," May said.

Schools mark May for hearing, speech

The Chaffey High School Keywanettes Club, in association with Chaffey Joint Union High School District language/speech specialists, promoted May as Better Hearing and Speech Month.

Three district high schools sponsored poster contests depicting the theme "Speak Up: Let the World Hear You.

Revised EIR of sand, gravel quarry released

MAGIC CHEF .

By Patrick McGreevy

A sand and gravel quarry proposed for 485 acres north of Rancho Cucamonga would have "significant unavoidable adverse impacts" on the area's air quality, biological resources, land-use planning, traffic and appearance, according to the final environmental impact report released by San Bernardino County planners.

The report is the revised version of an earlier study released last December but criticized by neighbors of the proposed quarry as incomplete.

Neighbors of the proposed quarry site, such as Terra Vista planned community resident Anne Calinsky and Victoria planned community resident Marcia Young, say the latest report is also inadequate but based on its findings they will testify in opposition of the project at a public hearing next Tuesday.

"It's not adequate at all," said Calinsky. "just going through it casually I've come up with 15 pages of notes and questions. The residents are definitely still going to oppose it (the quarry). I don't think they can mitigate all the problems that are inherent to that project."

Young added that any effects such as dust, noise or traffic would have to be endured for the entire 45-year life of the quarry, which is proposed to mine 24.8 million cubic yards of sand and gravel during that time.

"We are definitely opposed to it and we don't think the report adequately addresses our concerns," said Young, whose group collected 400 signatures on petitions against the quarry.

Ewald Burmeister, vice president of the San Bernardino firm proposing the quarry, Fourth Street Rock Crushers, said he thinks the latest report does adequately address the environmental impacts of the project.

When asked if he thinks the report's conclusions should result in the project being approved by the Planning Commission, Burmeister said. "We don't foresee any problems."

Residents of the two planned communities met Monday night to plan a strategy for next week's public hearing in San Bernardino.

The hearing will determine whether the report is adequate before sending it on to the Planning Commission for a decision on the project.

The report repeats concerns expressed in December by its consultant-author that some environmental impacts by the quarry and adjacent cement and asphalt proportioning plants will be unavoidable.

"Dust nuisances could occur northeast of the site if residential land uses are developed in this area." the report says of the air quality issue. The report says that the effect on the area's biology would also be significant because 465 acres of alluvial scrub habitat would be removed

On the issue of land-use provisions of county and city of Rancho Cucamonga general plans insofar as biology, traffic and visual resources have associated significant unavoidable impacts and a loss of open space would occur." The report also says the area would be affected by traffic when slow-moving trucks making 124 round-trips a day at the site would enter and exit the site at Highland Avenue, "posing potential safety problems and causing inconvenience to drivers.

Despite the sections of the report on the unavoidable impacts, Young said she does not think the report sufficiently addresses the affect on nearby residents of traffic, dust and safety issues.

Volunteers at Dona Merced School in Rancho Cucamonga were honored at a Volunteer Celebration held last Wednesday at the elementary school. Contributing more than 200 hours were Debbie Erickson, Sharon Slaman, Fran Arrendondo, Judy Aviles, Peggy Mitchell, Lori Keyner and Sande

Top honors also went to Gayle Norton, Caron Bock, Diane Klempner, Pat Lashbrook, Janet Lopez, Gail Roberts, Cindi McKenzie, Kelly Webster, Nancy Schlotthauer, Charlene Stolper, Diana Rote, Toni Shipley, Diane Solorzano, May Bow, Johnnie Kitts, Donna Whitehurst and Leslie

Aguilar for volunteering more than 100 hours. Also honored were "special" volunteers who contributed in an outstanding way to the school: Barbara Scheidt, Judy Aviles, Nancy Schlotthauer, Maxcine Glover, Pat Lashbrook, Sharon Slaman, Nancy LaNier and Debby Balders.

Top student volunteers were honored at an assembly on June 12. Students honored were: Julie Novak, Jennifer Rodgers, Vanessa Keyner, Erika Kirkpatrick and Leslie Schultz.

Approximately 300 parent and student volunteers were honored. Hours donated for the year totaled 8,500.

Following the awards presentation, volunteers were treated to a light luncheon.

Mock robberies to help train store workers

The Rancho Cucamonga sheriff's station is planning mock robberies with city banks and large businesses to help employees know what to do when real crooks show up.

Sheriff's officials hope to teach workers how to act during armed robberies and to show employees how to protect evidence afterward.

The Rancho Cucamonga station's crime prevention unit will explain how to give suspect information to officers; retain information on identities and vehicles; and preserve physical evidence. Sheriff's deputies plan to enter the institutions posing as customers and then 'rob' the place. After employees contact the Sheriff's Department, the Rancho Cucamonga station will send officers to the holdup location to interview employees and try to gather physical evidence.

Employees will be evaluated by officers and advised of proper procedures.

The department will also give local businesses checklists of preventive measures against robberies.

For more information, contact the department's crime prevention unit at 989-6611.

Tortoise club urges protection for 'wanderers'

Desert tortoises have started their "wandering" season and need to be protected, said Phyllis Redway of Pomona, a member of the California Turtle and Tortoise Club.

She reported a number of the large desert tortoises recently have been picked up in streets and roads.

Many of these bear an identification sticker on the underside of their bodies.

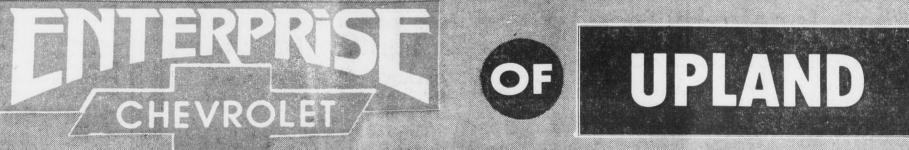

People finding a tortoise are asked to report the find to the local humane society. The Pomona Valley Humane Society and other societies work closely with the California Fish and Game department to locate the tortoises' owners.

Redway said the tortoise is a protected species and cannot legally be sold but may be "adopted" by residents.

If the owner cannot be located through its registration, adoption papers are available through the California Turtle and Tortoise Club.

Redway said many of these tortoises are on special medication for health problems since captured species are prone to respiratory and other illnesses. The prospective owner will be questioned and the residence inspected before adoption is approved, Redway noted.

Assignment to crowded courts would be delayed

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO - Four new Superior Court judges proposed for the county may have to initially work at the Foothill Communities Law and Justice Center in Rancho Cucamonga even though other areas of the county need them more, according to Presiding Judge Kenneth Ziebarth.

The county Board of Supervisors last week approved a resolution supporting legislation by Assemblyman Gerald Eaves, D-Rialto, to authorize the creation of the four new judgeships which would bring the total number of Superior Court judges authorized in the county to 29. There are also four commissioners.

The supervisors' approval of the additional judgeships is subject to their determination in the future that money is available to actually hire the judges and place them in a courtroom.

"We are anxious to get the authorization but at this time we are not able to fund that number of judgeships," said 3rd District Supervisor Barbara Riordan, summing up the board's position.

The legislation was introduced as the result of a recently completed Judgeship Needs Study by the State Judicial Council, which determined that the current workload in the county necessitates 29 Superior Court, not the 25 now authorized and the 24 now in existence. A 25th judgeship has been authorized by the state Legislature effective July 1 but has not yet been funded by the county.

The study was completed last November and was first submitted to the Board of Supervisors in April.

Second District Supervisor Cal McElwain said that. because of the expense involved, the authorization of a judgeship does not mean one will automatically be created. It costs $500,000 to create a judgeship because such an action means hiring of a judge, bailiff, clerk, secretary, probation officer, deputy district attorney and other support personnel and furnishings, according to David Baker, the Superior Court Executive Officer and County

"When you're talking about four judges, you're talking about $2 million," McElwain

Baker said internal investigations made since the state study have determined that the county's current workload actually necessitates a 30th judge as well.

If Eaves' legislation passes, the soonest the four new judgeships could be funded and set up would be January of 1987, Baker said.

Baker said the state study did not address where the county's needs are. However, an internal investigation found that two judges are needed in the desert, where two judges each now work in Victorville and Barstow. Other judges are also needed in the central court in San Judge Ziebarth will soon be transferring to the West Valley where he will join seven other judges in Rancho Cucamonga. One Juvenile Court judge is proposed to stay in the Ontario courthouse.

The eight judges in the Foothill courthouse will have a workload only slightly above the normal capacity for eight judges, Ziebarth said. As a result, the new judges, when they are financed, would probably need to be assigned elsewhere in the county.

However, Ziebarth said there are no additional courtrooms.in the desert or in San Bernardino so, if the judgeships are approved, they may have to work out of the Foothill courthouse "for the time being.

With all eight courtrooms proposed to be used on the third floor of the Foothill courthouse and two of six rooms to be used on the second floor, there will be four courtrooms available in Rancho Cucamonga if the Board of Supervisors chooses to fund the judgeships, Ziebarth said.

County boosts relief payments to settle lawsuit

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO - The county's general relief welfare payments will increase by $801,145 per year to settle a lawsuit charging that existing payments are not adequate.

As a result of the agreement approved last week by the county Board of Supervisors, the individual who currently receives general relief welfare payments of as little as $99 per month for food, housing, utilities, clothing and transportation would receive as much as $222 starting July 14, with adjusted higher amounts for additional qualifying family members, according to James Fare, director of the county's public social services department.

Although the county's standard general relief payment to individuals is $99, it currently pays an average of $115 each, which is still "ridiculously low," according to Joy Young, an attorney for Inland Counties Legal Services (ICLS), which sued the county on behalf of indigent clients.

"We think this is a longoverdue change that will be welcome to indigents in the county," Young said.

General relief welfare is the amount of money the county pays to indigents who do not qualify for other, higher paying welfare programs such as food stamps and Aid for Families of Dependent Children. The average stay on the general relief welfare roll is six months, after which most recipients qualify for other forms of state and federal welfare, county officials say. The existing level of payment requires an annual expenditure by the county of approximately $200,000 so the additional costs resulting from the settlement will boost the general relief budget to approximately $1 million, Fare said.

Much of the additional $801,145 cost goes to the increased benefits but a large portion also goes toward satisfying agreements for better enforcement of eligibility requirements. An additional 10 eligibility workers will be hired as a result of the settlement of the lawsuit filed by ICLS in April of 1985, Fare said.

He said that as a result of the agreement, ICLS has dropped its lawsuit against the county.

The higher level of funding has been anticipated in the proposed budget for the fiscal year begining July 1, which is scheduled for Board of Supervisor approval later this

8 teachers needed for Upland's schools

Eight new teachers could be added to the Upland School District next year in order to meet the needs of the growing elementary schools

Superintendent George Renworth said salaries for the additional teachers are part of the approximately $18.7 million tentative budget approved by the trustees last week.

Although there had been little growth in Upland's schools over the past decade and a drop in student population in the early 1980s, the district is facing a period of growth, particularly in the elementary schools, Renworth said.

"It (growth) is pretty spread all over the district. For some reason neither junior high grew very much, but all the elementaries with the exception of Foothill Knolls grew this year," he said.

The tentative budget, which will be sent to the county and will be voted on again by the trustees later this summer, asks for a 5.4 percent increase over last year.

Renworth explained that the district only asked the state for funding for four additional teachers at the beginning of the 1985-86 school year. But eight more were hired during the year to teach the 360 students added to the district during that Although only four teachers will be hired at the start of the next school year. Renworth said the district is requesting the money now because of the anticipated need for four additional teachers during the year.

Programs for elderly face budget cutback of 3.25%

that help senior citizens have been notified that they will each receive a 3.25 percent budget reduction this year as a result of the implementation of the federal budget-cutting measure Gramm-Rudman.

Both the West Valley Regional Council on Aging and the Steelworkers Oldtimers Foundation must reduce their revenues in the fiscal year that ends June 30, because of the action in Congress to reduce the federal deficit, according to James Fare, administrator of the county's human resources

The West Valley Regional Council on Aging was told it will receive $626 less than the $19,260 in federal funds it expected to receive this year The program provides services including visiting nurses for senior citizens in the West Valley

Fare said that because the agency's West End Senior Citizens Service and YMCA Cardiac Therapy Program will not be able to implement their contracts with the agency, there will be some surplus funds to cover the lost federal revenue and still pay for the agency's higher insurance costs as well as increasing services by the Visiting Nurses Association, city of Montclair and Organization for After Stroke Resocialization

The Fontana-based Steelworkers Oldtimers Foundation will have to reduce its $10,000 contract for emergency home repair by $325.

The foundation's program provides minor home repairs for senior citizens in Ontario, Chino, Bloomington, Fontana, Rancho Cucamonga, Upland, Rialto and surrounding areas.

As a result of the federal budget cuts, the program will be able to provide home repair services for 339 senior citizen this year instead of the 350 it originally was funded to help. Fare said

When weekends arrive, so do bargain hunters

By Jennifer Lowe

And you thought baseball was America's favorite pastime.

Not anymore. Just ask anyone who's born to

When weekends come, bargain hunters go. Knowing that, Chaffey College students have capitalized on the nation's fetish with buying and produced a bargain shopping guide.

In its fifth edition, the pocket-sized "Bargain Shopping" lists spots in Southern California where bargains — many relating to home economics - can be found.

"It started in a seminar class," explains Elizabeth Wright, a Chaffey home economics teacher. Several years ago students abandoned word-of-mouth and compiled their shopping tips

Every year the book sells, and all 300 copies should go this year as well, Wright says.

"Most people come up and ask if we've got the books," adds Pam Murray, a second-year Chaffey student who oversaw this year's edition. The book categorizes shopping spots by area and item, listing a number of places in the West Valley and as far away as Capistrano Beach.

Items are listed under "Materials," "Garments," "House and Home,""Let's Eat In," "Let's Eat Out" and "Everything Else."

"I think I get some business from the book," says Joanne Lew, owner of The Lace Shop in Upland, which is listed on page 138 of the book. The college's students are good about referring

Most of the stores listed sell merchandise at a discount, Wright says. One year she went to a silver store listed in the book and bought enough wedding gifts to last for two years.

Some of the more unusual listings include Dog Show Specialties in Colton, which sells dog supplies such as dog life jackets; the Hollywood Fancy Feather Co., selling ostrich feathers in any color; and Lucy's Doll Hospital in Alta Loma which restores and repairs antique dolls.

A majority of the items appeal to those who sew, and the book will probably keep that theme,

The department has no plans to expand the book - either in scope or sales - mostly because it's a struggle to publish it now, Wright

At $7 a book, any profit left from the $1,200 publishing cost — funded by the Home Econmics Club — goes toward department scholarships.

Oustside of the department, the book is available from the Bookworm in Upland, but doesn't move too quickly there, co-owner Mary Gattas says. "It's on display but the problem is no publicity."

Still, the department seems pleased by the book's success, and thinks it may be the only area school to publish a shopping guide. "It's rewarding," Wright says. "This department does a lot of fun things like this."

The book is available from Elizabeth Wright, Chaffey College Home Economics Department, 5885 Haven Ave., Alta Loma, Calif., 91701. The cost for a mailed copy is $7.25.

Omnitrans presented two safety awards

Omnitrans, the public transit agency for the valley region of San Bernardino County, recently received two safety awards from the Los Angeles Chapter of the National Safety Council.

For the second consecutive year, Omnitrans obtained a "perfect record" award for its service trucks remaining accident-free. Frank Taylor, an equipment mechanic, accepted the award on behalf of the agency at a banquet in Beverly Hills.

In the motorcoach transit division, Omnitrans earned a second-place award by reducing its reportable accidents by 20 percent under the previous year's total.

Omnitrans has won National Safety Council awards every year since 1982.

General Manager Robert Chafin received a different sort of honor when he was recently named "boss of the year" by the American Business Women Association's El Valle Chapter in San Bernardino.

Under Chafin's leadership, the number of female bus drivers has increased from 1 percent to 43 percent. The agency has also improved its on-time performance while winning awards for safety.

Nominations were submitted by members of the association's chapter in March and judged by a committee on the basis of business accomplishments and community activities.

Chafin and his wife, Ruth, live. in San Bernardino. They have four children. He has been a coach in the San Bernardino Little League for seven years., Chafin serves on the board of directors of Goodwill Industries.

Summerfest, shooting contest coming to West Valley parks

SAN BERNARDINO - This will be a busy summer for the county's parks in the West Valley with a Summerfest scheduled for Glen Helen Regional Park, and an international shooting competition as well as the separate Fourth of July celebration both proposed for Prado Tiro Park, according to Parks Director Steven Messerli.

All three events were given approval last week by the county Board of Supervisors.

The Summerfest at Glen Helen Regional Park near Devore is proposed to be held July 19 and 20 to be hosted by the county Regional Parks Department.

Messerli told supervisors that the festival will include displays and exhibits by public safety agencies, civic groups, youth organizations and service clubs.

The San Bernardino YMCA is assisting the county and Crosby Productions is arranging the dance exhibitions and musical entertainment. Other events include athletic contests, a shows and children's games, Messerli said.

The supervisors on last week approved the agreement with the promoter allowing him to book musical groups into the 200-acre park's grassy amphitheater.

Also approved last week was a lease agreement with the National Rifle Association for use of the Prado Tiro Shooting Ranges near Chino for the 1986 U.S. International Shooting Championships June 14-28.

"This will be the second year since the Olympic Games that the NRA has held this event at Prado Tiro," Messerli reported to the board. "Allowing the NRA to hold the Shooting Championships has helped Prado Tiro maintain its position as a world-class shooting facility, attracting internationally prestigious events."

In preparation for the separate Fourth of July celebration at Prado, the supervisors voted last week to increase the park fees from $3 to $5 for cars and to set a $2 fee for hay rides at the park.

hosting a celebration of the national holiday at the park and will have Country-Western entertainment, family games and a fireworks display over the lake, Messerli said.

West Valley cities ranked among top 25

By Ian Fallis

Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario and Fontana have again ranked among the top 25 California cities in balanced growth, according to a private research firm's study released last week.

Rancho Cucamonga and Ontario slipped in the rankings, while Fontana moved up a notch in the report from the Palo Altobased Center for the Continuing Study of the California Economy.

But those changes are really minor, said Steve Levy, the principal author of the report, which covered growth from 1980 through 1985.

"There's so small a difference between like eighth and 25th," Levy said. "There are 439 cities in California. To be in the top 40 is to be in the top 10 percent."

The report ranked the cities' growth in population, retail sales, residential building permits, and commercial construction per resident, from 1980 to 1986.

"It is a balanced measure," Levy said. "It doe'sn't mean just more people."

"The way it works is we look for broad strength in several different areas and not just one area," said Aviva Bernstein, marketing manager for the company.

For example, Adelanto, a city in the High Desert just west of Victorville, ranked second in population gain. "But it doesn't rank very high in the other areas, so it's not going to show up," Bernstein said.

By contrast, top-ranked Irvine was 16th in percentage of population gain, eighth in percentage of retail sales gain, seventh in residential permits and 11th in commercial building valuation.

"The combination of all these put it on top," she said. Irvine ranked first in the center's report last year as well. That report covered 1980 through 1984.

Rancho Cucamonga ranked 10th in the most recent report, down a bit from its eighth place in the center's previous report. The city was 39th in population gain, 22nd in retail sales increase, 20th in residential permits and 54th in commercial construction.

Ontario and Fontana tied for 18th. Last year, Ontario was ranked seventh and Fontana was ranked 19th.

In this year's report, Ontario was 70th in population gain, 41st in retail sales gain, 24th in residential building and 55th in commercial valuation.

Fontana was 14th in population gain, 33rd in retail sales gain, 30th in residential building and 153rd in commercial building.

Consultant hired to advise county on new jail size

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — The county has hired a consultant for $187,389 to determine how large a jail complex to build in Rancho Cucamonga next to the Foothill Communities Law and Justice Center.

The county Board of Supervisors last week approved the contract with the consultant firm of Steinmann, Grayson and Smylie to determine what the county jail system's facility needs will be in the next 20 years.

County officials have informally estimated that they will need to spend $50 million to build an 800-cell jail to handle the growing inmate population in the county.

On June 3, California's voters approved a bond issue that is expected to add $15 million for new jail construction to another $15 million previously approved by the state's voters for the

The $30 million in state bonds comes to the county in the form of matching funds, which means the county will have to put up approximately $20 million in remaining costs, according to Assistant Sheriff Ernie DeLaurie.

DeLaurie said that the new jail is needed because the Central Jail in San Bernardino and an auxiliary detention facility at Glen Helen are near capacity, sometimes reaching 2,500 inmates on weekends.

The needs study to be conducted by the consultant during the next four months will look at all the existing jail facilities, projections of population growth in the county and will determine how many cells the jail will have and how much it will actually cost, according to Joe Moscariello, the county's chief project engineer.

Fee election spurs complaint

By Matt Coker

A state board issued complaints against the Chaffey Joint Union High School District and its teacher union over a recent agency fee election, it was announced last week.

Within a month, the district, the Association of Chaffey Teachers and the Alta Loma High School instructor who filed unfair labor practice charges against them will go before an administrative law judge, a Public Employee Relations Board official said.

If the matter is not resolved in that informal settlement conference, a formal hearing, in which all sides can present evidence and witnesses, will be scheduled, said Barbara Stuart, PERB's regional attorney.

Drafting instructor Bob Fikes and other teachers supporting him claim the March 10 election, in which teachers voted 231 to 154 in favor of agency fees, was tainted due to illegal tampering which prevented many of the 277 teachers who did not cast ballots from knowing a vote was even under way.

With agency fees, the association can collect dues from all 662 district teachers, even those not belonging to the 378-member union.

In the complaint against the district, PERB claims before the vote Chaffey district officials "failed to maintain conspicuously posted signs (announcing) the election" at the Montclair, Ontario, Chaffey, Alta Loma and Upland high school

"By this conduct," the district "interfered with employee rights to participate or refuse to participate" in the election, according to the complaint.

campuses

"My reaction is that we delivered the posters, we know that they were posted and we thought we carried out our responsibility once we did that," Dean Smothers, the district's associate superintendent, said this morning. "Beyond that, anything I know is heresay."

Smothers said district officials were never told they were supposed to monitor posters. "This charge indicates that was part of our responsibility," he said.

The complaint against the association claims that ACT also infringed on employee rights to participate because association members or officers, without authorization, removed election flyers opposed to the collection of agency fees from teacher mailboxes at Montclair, Chaffey and Alta Loma high schools.

ACT President Maryellen Hill said today she had not yet received the complaint and, thus, could not react to it.

"I'm sort of like the defendant who doesn't know what he's charged with," she said. "...We will abide by whatever PERB says we're supposed to do (but) we've received nothing."

Stuart characterized issuance of the complaints as a "partial dismissal" since four of Fikes' six allegations and charges were dismissed.

Fikes amended those four charges and resubmitted them late last week, but Stuart dismissed them last week due to lack of evidence.

Though not all of his charges will be heard, Fikes, reached for comment, did not view the dismissals as a loss, and was optimistic about the eventual outcome.

He said he and the teachers supporting him want a new election.

"We feel the only fair and meaningful relief is another election," Fikes said. "And I believe the association probably would, in the long run, serve its own cause better by conducting its own open and honest election."

election."

Asked whether the district would support another election, Smothers said it has been the district's posture to remain neutral in the matter.

"This is an internal matter as far as the district is concerned," he said.

Noting that PERB certified the election 10 days after it was conducted, Hill said there is a process in the law in which a new election can be called.

By getting 30 percent of the bargaining unit to sign a petition in favor of another election, a recision election can be held next March, said Hill, who added she expects that will be attempted.

Eduardo Delgado, an inspector in the Chino circuit, and Los Angeles-area inspector Vernice Gee have charged that a draft report by members of the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service review team originally contained incriminating information of meat contamination and harassment of inspectors who objected.

However, a Washington official denied that the report had been deliberately destroyed. Spokeswoman Nancy Robinson called allegations of employee harassment and cover-up "totally unfounded."

Tom Devine, legal director of the Washington-based Government Accountability Project, filed the petition on behalf of Delgado and Gee charging that FSIS officials intentionally deceived the public about the review team's findings. Major health violations occurred in 127 of 236 Southern California packing plants last year, said the attorney whose organization protects whistleblowers.

Devine said that the head of the review team, Lou Gast, withheld the information to keep from alarming the public and to keep his record clean. Gast retired in February.

Devine's letter to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng asks him to investigate their charges and determine if the draft report was intentionally destroyed.

Through papers obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, Devine said he learned that the word processing disk containing the draft has been erased and that no copies

Delgado and several other area meat inspectors told members of the review team of the approval of contaminated meat for sale and of harassment of inspectors and veterinarians who resisted passing such meat

Because of such pressure, Delgado claimed that diseased meat and carcasses contaminated with fecal matter were being passed for the public to eat. Specific plants and supervisors were named in the draft report, he said.

In the petition, Devine noted that the California Department of Health Services and the USDA began a study of human disease caused by unwholesome meat after reported cases of salmonellosis newport tripled in 1985. The disease is often spread by tainted roast beef, he Delgado, who has been protesting plant conditions since 1979, was suspended twice. The first time was in 1983 and the second in April 1985, shortly after the review team's final report was released.

While Delgado thinks the report he claims was censored and his suspension are related, Robinson does not.

"The pattern of harassment is not there," she said. "They have their jobs. Some of the personnel problems with those inspectors happened well before the review team.'

Delgado said he belives important evidence was left out of the final report in order to protect middle management, which includes his immediate superiors.

It is those officials who have pressured inspectors and veterinarians to pass contaminated meat or to overlook unsanitary conditions. he said. If they complained, the officials took disciplinary action against them, he said.

In addition, Devine said that Gee was assaulted in a Los Angeles-area plant by an employee and was disciplined for fighting by his superiors.

"He had been stopping the line a lot and plant management had been getting mad at him," Devine said.

"The primary problem of midmanagement in Southern California remains intact. Those who did dirty work ... are still making life miserable for the inspectors," Devine said. "The censorship of last year's review report directly explains the midmanagement's survival."

Robinson said a recently completed follow-up report states that major improvements have occured in the Southern California meat industry since last year's review.

Delgado agrees with Robinson that top level management in Southern California has improved. He added that the two plants he works at now are clean and that he understands that most plants in the area have improved since the report

But he said he still meets with some resistance while trying to do his job, and he worries that without a thorough investigation into what happened to last year's report, contaminated and diseased meat could be put on the market again.

"How much faster could the public have been protected?" he asked. "And what's going to keep the FSIS from reverting back if those supervisors are still

Cucamonga Jr. High ranks among 100 best schools

By Marianne Aiken

Cucamonga Junior High School in Rancho Cucamonga's Central School District is one of the 100 best middle schools in California.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig named 60 middle schools and 30 high schools from around the state chosen for the first annual Distinguished School awards in a June 6 news conference in Los Angeles.

The awards recognize schools judged to be the best all-around in each grade span and in similar socio-economic groupings.

Cucamonga Junior High School was one of 40 runners-up in the middle school category.

Central School District
Superintendent Frank Cosca described the 750-student, 6ththrough-8th-grade school as the "flagship" school of the district and said the school has experienced a three-year climb in California Assessment Program
(CAP) scores.

"We just got it today," Cosca said of the award announcement. "I'm really proud of that school. Their (CAP) scores have come from below the band to above the band. We're expecting that their scores will be even higher this year."

Honig said the awards are a way of motivating and

"These past three years have been tough for educators and students as the eyes of the nation shifted suddenly to schools, and instant results were expected," said Honig in announcing the award-winners. "It is time that we begin to recognize their efforts and their successes. This recongnition may serve not only as a reward for achievement, but as a motivation for other schools to strive for excellence."

Local runners-up were recognized by an April 7 resolution of the county Board of Supervisors acknowledging the county's 12 nominees, said John Scharer, assistant superintendent of instruction for the Office of San Bernardino

County Superintendent of Schools.

The runners-up and winners will be nominated next year to apply for the United States Department of Education's National Secondary School Recognition Program.

Algebra and science course enrollments were emphasized to rate the schools on their performance and growth, said Donald J. Peterson, state coordinator of the California Schools Recognition Program.

"One of our state targets is to have more students take more years of algebra and science. At the middle school level, the number of students enrolled in algebra and science has been increasing," Peterson said. "It helps students in the long run when they have more academic

"The competition was very rigorous," he added. "There are many good quality schools in California. However, these were identifed as being the really top ones."

courses.

The candidate schools were identified by a computerized screening of all the state's 1,500 schools that have an 8th grade, and 800 high schools.

Distinguished high school winners in the county were Big Bear Lake Middle School in the Bear Valley Unified School District and Colton High School in the Colton Joint Unified School District. Imogene Garner Hook Junior High in the Victor Valley Union High School District was a runner-up in the middle school category.

Staff, students worked hard to win top-100 status at school

By Marianne Aiken

Cucamonga Junior High School's top-100 status is no fluke.

The school was named by state Superintendent of Public Instruction Bill Honig two weeks ago as one of the top 100 middle schools in the state because its staff and students worked for almost two years to make it happen, said Principal Dave

"I think the all-around atmosphere of the school has really changed," Soden said.

The school was the only junior high or high school in the West Valley to turn up on the list of distinguished award-winners announced last week.

An eight-point process recognized by the state Department of Education as contributing to a superior school environment was used to turn the school around, he said.

A clear school mission; an orderly environment; opportunity to learn; high expectations of students; frequent monitoring of student progress; maximum use of time; instructional leadership; and home-school communications are the elements of a successful school, Soden said

"Using those, we surveyed 85 percent of the parents, 100 percent of the students and staff, and took all the information from that to decide what our goals were going to be," Soden said.

"Students, parents, teachers, everyone was committed to successfully meeting those goals," he said.

The effort paid off not only in higher California Assessment Program (CAP) scores, but higher scores on the annual Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS), which shows individual students' progress from year to year in reading, language, math, social science, and science.

"We averaged a year above grade level for all three grades," Soden said.

Developer's builder's fees increased

By Marianne Aiken

Ray Patscheck won't be able to get out of paying about $750,000 in additional builder's

Patscheck, developer of a 328unit apartment project called Victoria Woods, planned for the corner of Arrow Route and Etiwanda Avenue, went before the Etiwanda School Board last Thursday night to ask for a break on his fees.

In 1985, when plans were approved for his development as part of the Etiwanda Specific Plan, builder's fees in the city were $550 per unit for apartments with two or more bedrooms, or half as much as the fee for single-family homes, Patscheck explained.

Then, on Aug. 22, 1985, builder's fees in the district jumped to $2,800 for single-family homes and apartments with two or more bedrooms, meaning that Patscheck would have to pay fees close to $900,000.

Patscheck said he wasn't notified about the increase.

by real estate market researchers Peyton Reed & Co. Inc. of Newport Beach showed his apartments' impact on schools would be only half that of single-family homes.

"I think each person should pay their fair share," Patscheck said.

The report showed his project could be expected to generate about 58 school-age children.

Board president Jerry Bredlau said the district raised fees to prepare for the burst of growth in the Etiwanda area.

"The city set fees of $1,100

"The city set fees of $1,100 (for single-family homes), which were OK for a period of time," Bredlau said. "We sat down and figured out what the cost of a school would be. The fees went up dramatically. We aproved them as a school board because that's what we needed to build schools." Bredlay said schools," Bredlau said.

Bredlau said an apartment with two or more bedrooms could be expected to generate as many children as a single-family home.

In the next several years, eight elementary schools and a junior high school will be needed.
